THE  Lanaux MANSION

A BEAUTIFUL SETTING for your special day

The perfect spot for your NOLA "I Do"

Built by a wealthy Connecticut lawyer post-Civil War, this stunner was passed down to his goddaughter Marie, who married local businessman George Lanaux — and voilà, the Lanaux Mansion was born.

Fast forward to today: the mansion's been a movie star (yep, Cat People and Benjamin Button), hosted celeb chefs like John Folse and Paul Prudhomme, and even made it onto hit show "Staycation" as well as some ghost-hunting shows!

Spoiler: it's been called one of New Orleans' most haunted spots — but hey, that just adds to the vibe.

Historic charm? Check.
French Quarter magic? Double check.

This 1879 mansion mixes timeless elegance with a touch of mystery — think movie-set glam meets Southern soul.

With iconic architecture, a rich (and slightly haunted) past, and photo ops on every balcony and brick, the Lanaux Mansion isn't just a venue — it's an unforgettable vibe.

Say "forever" where legends lived, stars filmed, and love stories keep getting written.
